PHIL 180 -- Phenomenology
Fall 2012

Professor:  Clinton Tolley
office:   HSS 8018
hours:   tbd
email:   ctolley [at] ucsd.edu

Teaching Assistant:  {to be determined} office:   --- hours:   ---

Lecture

Time:   Tuesday / Thursday, 11:00am-12:20pm
Location:   Warren Lecture Hall [WLH] 2113 [map] note change in room

Required textbooks

{available at UCSD Bookstore (Price Center), except * = TED}

*Brentano, Psychology from an Empirical Standpoint (Routledge, 1995)
Husserl, Ideas pertaining to a Pure Phenomenology (Routledge, 2012)
*Heidegger, History of the Concept of Time (Indiana, 1985)
Heidegger, Being and Time, trs. Macquarrie and Robinson (Harper, 2008)

Recommended textbooks

Dermot Moran, Introduction to Phenomenology (Routledge, 2000) [google]

Course description

Phenomenology emerges out of the context of 19th century German philosophy, as philosophers were attempting to come to grips with Kant's proposal that all of our knowledge is limited to appearances or 'phenomena', rather than to something whose reality is more mind-independent. While many took this to force us into a kind of skepticism about genuine knowledge, some of those working in philosophical psychology instead took something along the lines of Kant's science of phenomena to provide not just an ultimate antidote to skepticism but also the absolutely necessary place to begin all other philosophical and scientific investigation.

In this course, we will investigate phenomenology by tracing out some of the early highpoints its historical development, focusing on texts by authors like Franz BRENTANO (1838–1917), Edmund HUSSERL (1859–1938), and Martin HEIDEGGER (1889–1976), and Maurice MERLEAU-PONTY (1908–61).
Our goal will be to achieve a critical understanding of the method, findings, problems, and prospects of phenomenology, by working through some of the major texts of its key proponents.

Prerequisite: upper-division standing or consent of instructor.

Note: May be repeated for credit with change in content and approval of the instructor.

Course requirements

{tentative}
* mid-term take-home exam (1500 words)
* final paper (2500 words)
* attendance and participation

Schedule of readings

{tentative}
Brentano (wks 1-2)
Husserl (wks 3-5)
Heidegger (wks 6-8)
Merleau-Ponty (wks 9-10)

Reference links

Routledge Encyclopedia of Philosophy entries (requires sign-in)

- Overview of the phenomenological movement
- Franz Brentano
- Edmund Husserl
- Martin Heidegger
- Maurice Merleau-Ponty
- Overview of existentialism

Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy entries

- Overview of phenomenology
- Franz Brentano
- Edmund Husserl
- Maurice Merleau-Ponty
- Overview of existentialism

Course URL

http://philosophy.ucsd.edu/faculty/ctolley/courses/f12/phil180/index.html

---

last updated: September 26, 2012

maintained by: Clinton Tolley