Course Description
The purpose of this course is to carefully explore arguments and issues in contemporary moral ethics pertaining to the use of violence. Such issues include: the moral permissibility of the resort to personal self-defense, to war, to civil disobedience, to terrorism, and to torture. We will also investigate issues pertaining to pacifism. In each case, we will begin with an analysis of the concept followed by moral argumentation. Students should be warned that some of the readings will be graphic.

Grading
Tests - There will be three take-home exams. The first two will be worth 30% each of your total grade, and the last will be worth 40%. Each exam will consist of a set of short-answer questions from which you will be required to answer a certain number of them. All exams will be turned in electronically. The material covered in each exam covers only what was assigned since the previous exam.

Attendance - I will not take attendance. However, it is in your interest to show up to class. The readings can be quite difficult; the purpose of lecture is to elucidate and supplement these readings. In addition, much of what will be on the test will be taken from lecture, and will not be covered in the readings.

Excuses - Extensions to an exam’s due date will be granted for religious observances provided I am informed beforehand. Extensions will also be granted for very serious emergencies (hospitalization, bereavement, etc.) provided suitable evidence is provided afterwards. Otherwise, exams will be docked one point for every day that they are late (including weekends).

Reading
All readings will be available electronically on the class’s TritonEd website.

Academic Integrity
Any violations of academic integrity will be turned over to the Dean of Judicial Affairs. Details regarding what counts as cheating can be found here: academicintegrity.ucsd.edu. Consult the site or an instructor if you have any doubts or questions regarding what counts as cheating. All research papers will be run through the Turnitin service, which will determine whether the author has plagiarized from other papers or from Internet sources.

Contact
I am available at my office hours (HSS 8061) every Wednesday, from 2:15-3:45. If you cannot attend at that time, you should feel free to make an appointment by talking to me in person, or by contacting me by email.
